Misuse of U-Pass system leads to new student ID cards in fall

The new cards will have internal chips that can be deactivated.

By Courtney Tompkins
Assistant City Editor

Cal State Long Beach students will all receive new ID cards this fall because the City of Long Beach discovered a number of violations within the U-Pass system, according to Mary Stephens, vice president of administration and finance.

The U-Pass system, a contract between CSULB and Long Beach Transit (LBT) that has been active since fall 2008, allows current students, faculty and staff to ride all LBT buses for free with a CSULB ID card, according to Carolyn Weidell, transportation services manager for parking and transportation.

Stephens said the new ID cards will have an internal chip that can be deactivated once a student graduates or a staff member's employment is terminated. There is currently no way to shut off access to U-Pass with the IDs of past students or employees, meaning current students and employees will also receive the new ID cards.

The City of Long Beach contacted CSULB and said the violations create a loss of revenue. The city also asked

Growing up

As the garden ages, more maintenance is required to keep up its beauty.

By Daniel Serrano
Assistant City Editor

The livelihood of the Earl Burns Miller Japanese Garden, with its lush, green foliage and ponds filled with golden koi fish, makes it hard to realize that Cal State Long Beach's award-winning garden has reached its final days.

"At this point, the garden is dying," Development Assistant for the Japanese Garden Tracy Teran said. "It's reached its maturity."

Throughout the last 30 years, the Japanese garden grew from a young garden into a fully developed one. Teran said that the garden's new phase calls for requirements to keep it healthy.

"The garden is at a point where if it is not very well maintained, it will die," she said. "It's a very real consequence if you ignore its needs."

The Earl Burns Miller Japanese Garden earned a $47,000 federal grant from the Institute of Museum and Library Services in 2010 to determine what those requirements are. For the last two years, the grant funded a detailed conservation survey of the trees.

"We wanted to figure out the best way to take care of the garden," Teran said. "The point of the grant was to gather the best snapshot of the tree's health and how to take care of it for the next generation."

Keeping the trees healthy is only half the work, though. Maintaining the garden requires tedious labor from qualified aesthetic pruners.

"There are a lot of people that don't fully comprehend the idea of a living art form," Teran said. "Once an artist has finished something, it's complete. That's

Driver in Ramos case charged with speeding

Aliasghar Vahdatiasl will appear in court on May 23 for an arraignment.

By Ryah Cooley
City Editor

An arraignment date has been set for Aliasghar Vahdatiasl, the 78-year-old driver who allegedly hit Cal State Long Beach senior Elizabeth Ramos in February while she was jogging on Bellflower Boulevard, according to Long Beach Police Detective Sirilo Garcia.

The Long Beach City Prosecutor has charged Vahdatiasl with speeding and running a red light. The arraignment will take place on May 23 at 8:30 a.m. at the Long Beach Courthouse, Garcia said.

Based on the 130-foot skid marks that Vahdatiasl's car left, Garcia estimates that Vahdatiasl was driving 50 mph when the posted speed limit was 40 mph.

According to Sandra Stolpe, deputy city prosecutor for the City of Long Beach, speeding and running a red light are both infractions, and if Vahdatiasl is found guilty on both counts, he could pay up to $800, including court penalty assessments to the Long Beach Courthouse.

Stolpe said that on May 23, Vahdatiasl will enter his plea, and assuming that he doesn't waive his right to a speedy trial, the case will have to be brought to trial within 45 days of the arraignment.

Jerome Konell, the attorney representing the Ramos family, said the family will file a civil suit against Vahdatiasl in about two weeks for personal injury. He said that Elizabeth Ramos' medical costs have amounted to more than $500,000.

"It's a horrible tragedy, but it's also a miracle that Elizabeth [Ramos] is doing so well," Konell said.

Vahdatiasl could not be reached for comment.

Smoke from machine in Starbucks area leads to evacuation of University Library on Monday

BY ANDREA SCHUKLER
Staff Writer

The University Library was evacuated at 2:30 p.m. on Monday because smoke was coming from a machine in the Starbucks area, University Police Sgt. Christopher Schivley said. When officers arrived at the library, smoke was coming from a machine, but there was no fire, Schivley said. The machine was repaired, and business resumed in the library, Schivley said.

Vandalism turns out to be old key mark

A female student contacted University Police at 1:20 p.m. on Saturday reporting that her car had been keyed, Schivley said. According to Schively, the student believed her car had been keyed because there was a note left on her windshield stating, "It is very inconsiderate the way you parked." The student later called home and discovered that key scrapes were old and that there was no vandalism, Schivley said.

Students argue over basketball in Student Recreation and Wellness Center

A person contacted University Police at 3:30 p.m. on Monday in the Student Recreation and Wellness Center, regarding two male students who were arguing about a basketball, Schivley said. When officers arrived, there was no ongoing argument or crime, Schivley said.

Beachside College dorm resident smells marijuana

A male student contacted University Police at 11:30 p.m. Thursday to report that there was a marijuana smell coming from a nearby dorm room, Schivley said. Officers arrived, searched the suspected dorm room and found no evidence of marijuana, Schivley said.

iPod stolen from car in Parking Structure 3

University Police were contacted by a male student who reported that his $40 iPod was stolen from his trunk on Tuesday, Schivley said. There was no damage to his car, and there are no suspects at this time, Schivley said.

Some trees in the Earl Burns Miller Japanese Garden are worth several thousand dollars.

different than a tree that requires upkeep."

In addition to maintaining the garden, the survey determined the value of the trees in the garden, some of which were found to be worth several thousand dollars. But the Earl Burns Miller Japanese Garden Curator Vergil L. Hettick said a tree's value is almost impossible to accurately determine.

"We cannot 'know' the value of something until it is actually sold," Hettick said via email. "This is particularly true with Japanese Black Pines, as there are no two exactly alike."

Teran also said there aren't plans to sell any trees in the garden anytime soon.

All things considered, Teran said that so long as the garden is properly maintained, it will be available for the students and community for years to come.

"Many public gardens in Japan and other countries have been around hundreds of years," she said. "With proper maintenance, planning and financial support, the garden could exist for at least this time."

U-Pass

for a way to better manage eligibility to prevent future abuse. The chip technology will allow the university to determine who is currently enrolled or employed and who is not, according to Associated Students Inc. President John Haberstroh.

When the U-Pass system first began, there was an average of 1,200 CSULB students and faculty boarding LBT busses per day. Currently there are more than 10,000 students and faculty boarding per day, according to Dana Lee, government relations manager for LBT.

Lee said that LBT understands that there may be misuse with any ID card system, which is why it works closely with the university to solve any problems that may rise.

Weidell said there have been few incidents of attempted fraudulent boardings. The majority of students and staff use the U-Pass system "in an honest manner," she said.

CSULB is currently locked in a three-year contract with LBT, which became effective in May 2012 and is set to expire in 2015, according to Lee. CSULB has paid LBT more than $1.5 million for three years of U-Pass service, according to Stephens.

LA Metro, along with LBT, will be switching to the chip technology, so students will also be able to ride LA Metro using their ID cards in the fall, Stephens said.

Campus cops asking too much in pay raises

The money generated from Proposition 30 is about to reach the Cal State University system budget, and everybody wants a piece of the pie.

The Statewide University Police Association (SUPA) is a non-profit organization that represents police officers of the Cal State University system. SUPA wants pay raises and benefits for its officers who protect CSU campuses on a daily basis.

SUPA President Jeff Solomon said in a Daily 49er article that the CSU officers have not seen a raise since 2007. SUPA is currently bargaining with the CSU to fix issues with officers' salaries and benefits. However, the CSU wants to hold off on salary negotiations until the next fiscal year.

Our View

The Daily 49er editorial board can sympathize with the campus police. Right now, there is no pay scale in place that gives gradual pay increases with each year of service.

SUPA says this is a problem and that some officers are leaving the CSU.

SUPA is asking for a 4.6 percent pay increase every year per officer. The increase would be an incentive to keep officers in CSU service for longer, instead of a having them leave for more lucrative jobs with other campuses like those with the University of California system.

If officers start leaving, there could be a problem with campus security. While Cal State Long Beach crime is down due to several factors, including surveillance cameras and the campus escort service, CSULB and the rest of the CSU campuses can never be too prepared.

However, we think that a 4.6 percent increase every year is too much.

The CSU faculty fought for years for pay raises, and they are expected to receive a smaller pay raise. The 4.6 percent increase SUPA is asking for may be too high for the CSU to pay, regardless of the Prop. 30 revenue.

The 4.6 percent increase could be a bargaining tool that SUPA will use to work down from. It could be a good strategy if SUPA is looking for something less than what it is demanding.

Once the CSU gets its Prop. 30 money, there will be a lot of tough decisions to be made about what to do with it. There are so many different parts of the CSU that need funding that some groups are bound to be left out. If SUPA wants its demands to be heard, then maybe it should consider a more reasonable pay increase. Even with a potential boost in CSU funding for the next fiscal year, money will still be tight.

Are campus police entitled to a 4.6 percent annual pay raise?

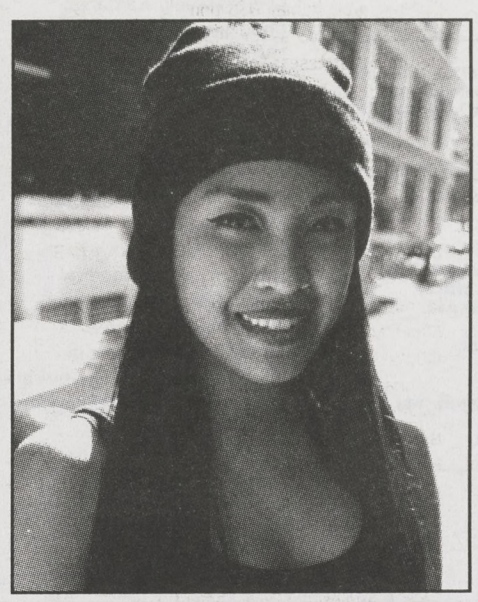

"No. I don't like the police. I don't view their services as necessarily needing more money."

-Sarina Carlisle,
junior anthropology major

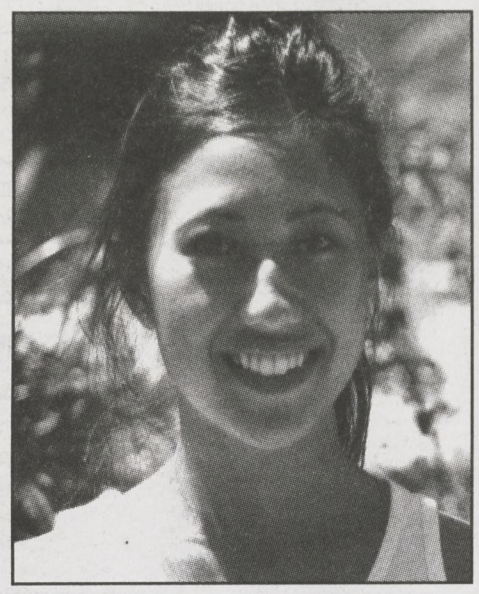

"I think they should wait until we actually get the money [from Propostion 30] because we don't even know the situation yet."

-Chris Austin,
senior political science major

"I don't really see what they do, so I don't see why they should get a pay raise. I hardly see them around on campus, so I can't really judge."

-Mallory Rogue,

"I don't think they are because if they are interested in a higher paying job, they should find a job that requires more of them."

What Your Teachers Never Taught You
The National Budget – Dr. George A. Kuck

The House Republican budget philosophy is simple: the government shouldn't spend more than it takes in. A budget that balances creates a path to prosperity. We need to cut out waste. On April 10th, President Obama released his budget -- 65 days after the legal deadline. The Senate rejected his 2013 budget 99-0 while the House rejected it 414 – 0. This Obama's budget also never balances. Your generation will be paying for added debt. It adds $8.2 trillion in new debt -- increasing your family's share of the debt by $60,980. It adds $1.1 trillion in new taxes -- on top of the $1 trillion in ObamaCare taxes and $600 billion in recent tax hikes on the middle class. Finally, there is $964 billion in new spending above projected economic growth. Amazingly, President Obama has claimed that the budget won't add "one dime" to the deficit. Can you afford what the Democrats are selling? Their liberal agenda is already driving up gas prices due to the money being printed under quantitative easing. It's raising the cost of groceries. It's forcing many recent graduates to take on two or three jobs to make ends meet. It's causing many middle-class families to scramble to either pay for or find affordable health insurance as companies cancel the company health care because of ObamaCare costs. President Obama's raid on Medicare to the tune of $723 B has left senior citizens trying to find a doctor. President Obama's new budget will cause more seniors to be denied access to healthcare. Already health care rationing has kicked in for people needing breast and colon cancer treatment using the drug Avastin. At the end of the day, President Obama's budget is an unpriortized, costly proposal. Quiz: Should we try to balance the national budget? What should be our budget priorities? How much of the national debt do you think you will have to pay? What method will the government use to have you pay your "fair share?"

Campus COUTURE

The fashion design department will hold the annual fashion show on Friday night.

By Josh Butler
Staff Writer

Fashion design students at Cal State Long Beach will showcase a year's worth of hard work on Friday night at the annual Campus Couture runway event.

Senior and junior designers will unveil up to seven garments each at Campus Couture, with pieces coming from fashion design classes and assignments.

Friday's event at the Carpenter Center will be the 25th installment of Campus Couture. Head coordinator Kristina Kochan said that 34 senior designers, 21 junior designers and almost 80 organizers and volunteers have been working for a year to stage the event.

"We hire a professional production company, DJ and camera crew and gather fashion student volunteers to do the production aspects," Kochan said. "We audition models, write a script and invite industry professionals to judge the event."

This year's judges include Mikey Koffman, LA Fashion Weekend producer and co-founder of West Coast Chopper; Joe Vecchiarelli, producer of Fashion Star; Michael Costello, finalist on TV show Project Runway; and industry professionals and CSULB alumni Jennifer Backoff and Mary Byrd. They will judge in a number of categories including Most Marketable, Most Innovative and Best Collection, with the Best Collection winner receiving a place in the Emerging Designers Runway Show at LA Fashion Weekend.

"This is a huge event for our campus. I'm hoping that as the program continues to grow, our amazing fashion merchandising and design program and university will gain more notoriety for it," Kochan said, adding that proceeds from ticket sales go toward rebuilding and updating fashion and design classrooms.

Student designers exhibiting in the event have drawn from a wide array of influences and time periods for their pieces. Maria Jaime, a senior textiles and clothing major, said her pieces are "for women that are not afraid to stand out and be different," evoking the spirit of her favorite decade: the 1960s.

> "We get to see our garments go down on a real runway, work with models and learn how fashion shows are put together."
> -Maria Jaime, student

"I drew inspiration from the free spirit, pop art, music and politics of the era," Jaime said. "I wanted to create a collection conveying that funky can be glamorous."

Linh Nguyen, another senior clothing and textiles major, took inspiration from both past and present, combining royalty and music in a collection that incorporates horse hair braid, brocades and sheer fabric.

"My inspiration was derived from the Elizabethan period and music from The XX," she said, in reference to the acclaimed British band.

Nguyen said she likes the exaggerated silhouettes, gilded fabrics and textures of the Elizabethan period but also hopes to capture the mellow mood of The XX's music.

Both are excited about unveiling their work to the public and for the chance to rub shoulders with fashion industry professionals at the event. That doesn't mean they don't have a few pre-show jitters, however.

"This will be the first time I showcase my work. It's nerve-wracking," Jaime said. "I get to expose my work to judges from the fashion industry, and this could lead to a break. We get to see our garments go down on a real runway, work with models and learn how fashion shows are put together."

Nguyen, too, is excited about the prospect of showing off her works.

"The show benefits students because it gives some of them the opportunity to produce a show," she said. "It lets the design students get the chance to produce a collection they are proud of."

Campus Couture takes place on Friday, May 10 at 7 p.m. in the Carpenter Performing Arts Center. Tickets are on sale for $25, and all audience members receive a free tote bag.

CASPER WARE

The NBA hasn't worked out for the former Long Beach State point guard yet. In the meantime, he's in Italy, tearing up Liga 2 with A.S. Junior Casale.

By Matthew Sousa
Staff Writer

Learning to say "bonjourno" and "da portar via," has come in handy lately for former Long Beach State point guard Casper Ware.

"Whenever I pick up food at Burger King, I've learned to ask for it to go, which is 'da portare via,'" Ware said. "I don't speak Italian, but I can say a few things, including some bad words my teammates taught me."

Adjusting to the language is just one of the small adjustments the 2011 and 2012 Big West Player of the Year has had to make. After completing a bright stint with the LBSU men's basketball team, Ware pursued basketball professionally. He ended up at A.S. Junior Casale in Italy, where he starts at point guard and leads the second-division league in points and assists.

Ware has averaged 21 points and six assists over the season. His best game came against Brescia, when he registered 38 points, eight rebounds and nine assists.

Aside from some of the language barriers he's faced, Ware said one of the most challenging adjustments has been being away from home.

"I'm very close to my family, and it's been really hard not getting to see them," he said. "I Skype or use Viper with them every day."

Ware's father, Casper Ware Sr., said that it was difficult to see his son go but that he knew it was a great opportunity for his son to take his game and career to the next level.

"As my wife sat on the porch, she started to cry as she watched us drive off to the airport," Ware Sr. said. "Tears came down my eyes too when I drove him. It hurt a lot inside because it was going to be a long period of time."

For Ware, adapting to his new environment was challenging at first, but his current coach, Giulio Griccioli, said he's had a remarkable transition.

"It was not easy for Casper [Ware] to be away from his family and hometown," Griccioli said. "But now he's done a great job of adjusting."

According to former LBSU teammate and long-time friend Larry Anderson, Ware's close relationship with his family made the adjustment especially tough.

"It's the first time he's away from his family," Anderson said. "If his family was living in Italy, he could have probably been doing this for a lifetime."

Director and general manager of A.S. Junior Casale Marco Martelli said his club has a lot of experience with the young American player to get to the next stage.

"Even though I never met Casper in person," he said, "we had a great feeling about him after a phone interview."

> "I don't speak Italian, but I can say a few things, including some bad words my teammates taught me."
> - Casper Ware

After making what he described as a good move for both parties, Martelli said he has no regrets on getting Ware signed to a deal.

"He's like a sponge," Martelli said. "He understands what you need from him, and his relationship with the team from coaches to players have been great. He's brought personality, scoring and is always on time. A point guard must be an example on the court, and he provides our team just that."

Griccioli said the addition of Ware to the team has had a huge impact, and Ware played an instrumental role as a leader.

"We won many games this season by just a few points, and he always got the ball for the most important shot at the end of the game, and he never missed," Griccioli said. "He's very reliable."

LBSU men's basketball coach Dan Monson said playing in Europe was a great option and gave Ware a great financial opportunity. Monson also spoke highly of Ware's commitment in getting the maximum results.

"His work ethic is unparalleled," Monson said. "He's one of the hardest working players I've ever coached. I recall how one game he missed a few free throws, and when I arrived at the court the following morning at 7 a.m., he was already practicing his shot with his dad since 6 a.m."

Ware Sr. agreed, saying that he knows "wherever [Ware] goes, he produces."

As he continues to produce on the court, he's even done so in the kitchen. Being more than 6,000 miles from home, Ware gets his occasional craving for a taste of home.

"When I first got here, I used to eat at an Italian restaurant down my street, but I eventually started wanting good American food," Ware said. "So I started cooking barbecue chicken, quesadillas and fried chicken, among others."

Like comfort food, Ware has many fond memories of the time he spent at LBSU. He was not the only one quick to share them.

"It was funny and incredible to see his first dunk," Anderson said. "It was surprising to see, and I was more hyped. He tried to act all cool with his serious facial expressions like it wasn't a big deal."

With high hopes of suiting up for an NBA team one day, Ware said he remains focused on the objective at hand with a committed attitude.

"It's a great place to showcase your talent, and my agent told me it's a good step to getting to the NBA," Ware said. "My life in Europe mainly consists of waking up and going to practice, eating and sleeping. I don't really get out much."

With a dream of playing in the NBA still alive, though, basketball is all Ware needs.
